ROMAL Baking Powder

A Grape Cream of Tartar Powder Absolutely Pure

Royal makes the most delicious and healthful hot-breads, biscuit and cake.

For safety sake, use only a baking powder whose label shows it is made with cream of tartar.

Alum baking powders are considered so injurious to health, and their promiscuous sale a source of such danger, that their use is universally condemned by physicians and health officers. In many States the law requires that they shall be branded to warn consumers that they contain alum.

In the District of Columbia, under the laws of Congress, the use of alum in bread, biscuit, cake and other food is a misdemeanor.

Alum baking powders may be known by their price. Powders sold from ten to twenty-five cents a pound, or twenty-five ounces for twenty-five cents, are not made of cream of tartar.

ONE OF THE BIG SHOVELS USED IN SCOOPING OUT THE LAKE AT SALTAIR.

Above is represented one of the two dredgers at work on the new bathing lagoon at Saltair. This improvement has been rendered necessary by the shrinkage of the great lake so that bathers are forced to go quite a ways out to reach water deep enough to bathe comfortably. The lagoon is located partly under and in front of the pavilion. It is being built by scraping the sand to the depth of 10 inches or a foot, and heaping this sand up in a circular dyke 2,400 feet in circumference, five feet high, 10 feet wide on the top and 220 feet wide on the botton. There are 40 men and 40 terms engaged in this work. They began the first of the year, and the finish is set for May 15, the cost of the improvement being over $30,000. The depth of water in the lagoon will vary from 21/2 to 4 feet. Other valuable improvements in the way of public entertainment, are being pushed at Saltair beach

CLOSES COURSE WITH "DAVID."

Frof. Clark Delights Large Audience in Reading of Romantic Drama.

HAS TINGE OF TRAGIC IN IT.

Hard Road Over Which He Traveled to the Throne.

Barratt hall was well filled again last night, by a most attentive and appreciative audience in attendance on Prof. Rice; and the presentation of this now noted literary work was made so effectively and impressively that the lecturer easily held his hearers' attention firmly to the close,

As introductory, the professor said,

As introductory, the professor said,

"This is a poetic drama, a romantic drama, with a tinge of the tragic, and is the only really American poetic drama of recent years of any particular merit. We are glad to welcome to the cause of literature any new American writer. Mr. Rice is now putting in his best efforts on a new dramatic work for which we have great hopes. True, he has been more or less imbude with the faults and the fancies of the Rosetti clique, but he is drawing away the faults and the fancies of the Rosetti clique, but he is drawing away from their influence, and we shall have better hopes than ever of him in consequence. Mr. Rice takes the Bible story of David as his general theme, interweaving with it with poesy and the fruits of a fertile imagination. The first scene opens in the hall of King Saul of Israel at Gibeah, and through the porch we can discern in the disthe porch we can discern in the dis-tance the camp of the Phillistines, the traditional enemies of the Israelites. The author introduces dancing girls re-clining in the hall and exchanging gosclining in the hall and exchanging gossip over the situations occasioned by the stirring exigencies of the times."

The lecturer then read from the play, with skitful elocutionary descriptive of the conversation of these dancing girls who included in their talk plentiful gossip about David.the young shepherd king whom the Prophet Samuel had very lately annointed as the future king of God's chosen people. Then the scene was just previous to the shepherd's conflict with Goliath of Gath, and the intensely dramatic surroundand the intensely dramatic surroundings at the time were admirably porings at the time were admirably por-trayed by Mr. Rlee, and as admirably presented by Prof. Clark. The plot of the drama introduces lively amatory passages in which Michal, the daugh-ter of Saul, and David figure in a treatment which seems to be true to oriental experiences, and yet involves a flavor of the modern that lends uniqueness and a piquancy to the whole. The passage in which Michal is mentioned in portent as the coming queen of Israel, and the consternation into which Saul's court is thrown in into which Saul's court is thrown in consequence, is a dramatic gem, the value of which the talented lecturer fully impressed upon his audience. Then the introduction of Jonathan, with the subsequent exhibitions of that model of brotherly affection which forms one of the most charming idyls of Old Testament story, is eleverly handled by Mr. Rice, and this, too, Prof. Clark presented in a taking and effective way. There is great merriment in Saul's court when it is announced with mock gravity that the boy David proposes to fight the gigantic Phillistine, a merriment made the more realistic through the lecturer's natural interpretation of it. "We all know the story of David and Goliath," said the elocution Phillistines were routed, and Israel was victorious. But this only increases was victorious. But this only increases the difficulties of David, for success in battle results in events which puts Michal further from him. The chorisers sing, 'Saul has slain his thousands, but David his tens of thousands!' And this is used by David's enemies to embitter Saul against him, and Michal 's thrown the death and and Michal is thrown into doubt and painful perplexity as to the possible outcome. It is true the king is finally soothed by the harp of the shepherd boy, but his wrath returns by an unfortunate interposition of Michal, who misunderstands the future king, though she subsequently is righted, and flees from the court when Saul proposes to make her marry some one else than David, whom she loves. The death of Samuel, the pursuit of David by Saul, samuel, the pursuit of David by Saul, the cutting of the latter's skirt in the cave. Saul's contrition, and the dialogues incident thereto, a form of dramatic grouping, the recital of which was listened to with intense interest. was listened to with intense interest. And not an unimportant feature was the deliberate and cold blooded orders given by Saul that Michal should be assassinated were he killed in battle with the Phillistines. The visit to the habits of the Witch of Endor, one of the most exciting episodes in Old Testament history, was an event of the evening's recital which held the entire audience almost breathless. Prof. Clark showed his elocutionary powers to advantage in portraying this scene, with the ghost of Samuel rising from the earth, and Saul's agonized anxiety. The the ghost of Samuel rising from the earth, and Saul's agonized anxiety. The last scenes include love passages between Michal and David, and the exciting environment of the last day of Saul before joining Samuel, and David's anxious movements at the close of the day that was so disastrous to the Israelitish forces. raelitish forces.
